

Get to know your Port of Anacortes Meet Kevin Anderson!

From his embracing of Green Marine and launching the Port's Greenhouse Gas Inventories, to his thoughtful relationship building with staff and our key external partners, and even to his irreverent Friday Tracks, Kevin is a star.

Brenda Treadwell, Director of Planning,
Properties and Environmental

Joined the Port:

November 18, 2019

Role: Environmental Specialist

Past experience:

Environmental Management Specialist at Swinomish Indian Tribal Community, Habitat Stewardship Specialist at DNR

Education:

Master's Degree in Environmental Studies from WSU, Bachelor's Degree in Biology from Lewis & Clark College

Why did you decide to join the Port of Anacortes team?

The opportunity to work within my community. The Port's mission is also something that is very appealing to me.

What is the most exciting part of your career here at the Port of Anacortes?

Getting to be involved in a broad range of duties—One day I'm chasing geese out of the airport or permitting a project and the next I'm planning for a greenhouse gas inventory or doing stormwater compliance. Each and every day has its own challenges and rewards; these are the things that keep me stoked for work. Also being part of the larger Port team is great.

What is the one thing about you that would surprise people?

I lived in China for four years.

What never fails to make you laugh?

Pretty much any episode of Parks and Rec.

What is an ability you wish you had?

Any sort of musical ability; I am tone deaf and atrocious at karaoke.

What are a few of your hobbies?

I enjoy cooking, mountain biking, and reading.

What is the furthest you have traveled?

South Africa

What motivates you to work hard?

Growing up with a single mom who worked two jobs most of my childhood. She set a high standard for us and I try to give my best.

Pictured above from left to right: Quiet Cove, Seafarer's Memorial Park, eel grass beds